APPEAL TO SAVE FIUME MADE TO PARIS COUNCIL

French Premier Sending Complete Report To U.S. Senator

HEAR GOTTHARDI

Former Official Of City Taken By D'Annunzio Tells Conditions

WANTS FREE PORT

Rule Of Either Italians Or Jugo-Slavs, He Says, Would Be Ruinous

(American News Agency)

Paris, October 5.—Fresh appeals for prompt action to save Fiume are before the Peace Conference and, according to reports, will be sent to Senator Lodge of the United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. Premier Clemenceau declared Friday that he would forward complete data regarding the case to Senator Lodge this week.

Gotthardi, late head of the government of the city of Fiume, in opening his campaign here has declared that his fortune has been confiscated and that fleeing from Fiume he had gone to Belgrade where the Minister of Foreign Affairs had loaned him money to plead the case of Fiume.

Wealth Has Vanished

"Over a half million crowns in securities deposited in the town have disappeared," Gotthardi declared in his appeal to the Peace Conference," and today Fiume is in debt to the total of 2,000,000 crowns."

Gotthardi asked why no attempt had been made to ascertain the wishes of the people of Fiume.

"If annexed to Italy," Gotthardi said, "Fiume will be cut off from the back country and thereby will be the loser as the Jugo-Slavs will never send commerce through the port. If annexed to Jugo-Slavia Fiume will be a thorn in the side of every Italian resulting in a dangerous hatred."

Aims Are Stated

He urged that Fiume be made a modern city under neutral government with an elected council. The program of Gotthardi asks for the internationalisation of the port freedom from international politics, abolition of military service, universal suffrage and measures to make it a free port with other modern reforms.

Gotthardi emphasised in his published statement that the domination of either the Italians or the Jugo-Slavs in Fiume would absolutely ruin commerce and would later create a dangerous situation.

Benbow Rowe Gored In Death-Fight With Stag

Municipal Council Officer Is Painfully Wounded By Maddened Animal At His Home

Mr. E. S. Benbow Rowe, Assistant Secretary of the Muncipal Council and wellknown sportsman, it at the Shanghai General Hospital suffering from painful but not serious injuries which he received when he was gored by an angered stag at his home on Great Western Road Thursday morning. That he was not killed in the encounter with the deer, one of a collection of animals that Mr. Rowe has maintained in grounds at his home, is probably due to the courage of two mafoo employes who went to his aid after he had been attacked and hurled to the ground by the animal and who succeeded in beating it off with bamboo poles.

Attack Is Unexpected

The animals at the Rowe residence are quartered in an enclosure that has an area of about ten mow and it has been Mr. Rowe's practise to go among them without taking any particular precautions. On the morning of his encounter with the stag, which is one of two of the deer herd, he was examining several young deer when the stag rushed at him with lowered antlers. Before the mafoos were able to come to his assistance he was hurled to the ground, trampled and gored in a number of places. When he was removed to the hospital it was found that while his wounds are of a painful nature, serious results are not anticipated.

As a measure of precaution Mr. Frank R. Vida and Mr. M. O. Springfield yesterday morning decided to cut the antlers from the stag that injured Mr. Rowe.

Vida Throws Lariat

Twenty years ago Mr. Vida was a cowboy on the Parker Ranch on the Island of Hawaii. It was suggested that in order to capture the animal and cut off its antlers, Mr. Vida should lasso the stag. Messrs. Springfield and Vida entered the enclosure and the stag charged—making straight for Mr. Vida who had his rope ready to throw As the stag rushed at him Mr. Vida deftly shot the rope over his head and quickly pulled it taut. Mr. Springfield pinioned the front legs, both men tied the hind legs and the animal was helpless after a hard struggle The two then cut off the antlers.

A second stag caused more trouble for Mr. Vida and thrice the lasso failed to stop the animal. He finally caught the stag and with Mr. Springfield's assistance, cut off the horns.

Koreans in Siberia and Manchuria have also organised with the object of creating disturbances in Korea and they openly state that they have received $100,000,000 from America for the purpose of re-establishing the independence of Korea."

All Nations Participate In Shanghai's Celebration Of Birth Of The Republic

Program Of Military Reviews, Receptions, Races, Patriotic Demonstration, Parades And Lantern Processions Is Held

With other nations joining in, Shanghai Chinese enthusiastically celebrated the eighth birthday of the Republic of China yesterday. The program of receptions, patriotic demonstrations, parades, lantern processions and races went off with a joyous smoothness seldom equalled on previous occasions.

Outstanding in yesterday's observance of China's Commemoration Day was the co-operative spirit and the spontaneous participation of the Allied nations. While the thoroughfares were aflash with Chinese five-barred flags, Allied national colors were also conspicuous along the Bund, Nanking Road, Bubbling Well Road and Rue du Consulat. Most shops were closed and the weather was perfect. The rejoicing was general. The French Tramways were beflagged. All the Chinese vessels in Harbor dressed ship, while their crews were gathered on the upper decks and saluted the flag.

Impressive Demonstration

The demonstration at the Public Recreation Grounds, West Gate, attended by over 15,000 people, was most impressive. Early in the morning, crowds thronged the grounds and were assigned their booths. Ninety organisations were known to have been represented at the meeting, including many woman's organisations and girls' schools.

Promptly at 9 o'clock, the band of the Nantao Police struck up and the gathering made three bows to the huge national flag, which had been hoisted up on a post especially erected at the north end of the plot. The salute was led by a military officer representing the local Defense Commissioner, General Lu Yung-hsiang. Immediately after the salute, 15,000 throats thundered forth "Long Live the Republic." Children of the various schools then led in singing the national anthem.

Shortly before 10 o'clock, a huge serpentine queue of humanity wound its way out of the grounds led by the police band. Social, commercial, educational, philanthropic and religious organisations, schools, street unions, shop-keepers and boy scouts marched out of the enclosure. At West Gate divisions of the Nantao Fire Brigade joined the concourse. Boy Scouts on bicycles maintained communications along the route.

Fireworks And Cheers

As the procession progressed along the main streets thousands and thousands of fire-crackers were let off. The national colors waved vividly in the air and the spectators cheered while the paraders' procession echoed the cheering. The bands of the Shanghai Orphanage and the Pu Yi Industrial Institute were also in attendance.

General Wang Ju-chien, Commander of the Tenth Division and Acting Defense Commissioner of Shanghai, reviewed the arsenal troops yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The 37th, 38th, 39th and 40th regiments of the division participated and each member of the units received ten cents as a holiday present.

To entertain the throng at the Recreation Grounds an elaborate program of theatrical performances, cinemas, exhibitions and fireworks was arranged. At 1 o'clock, four schools started their plays on four different stages. The Second Normal School, presented the "National Enemy," the Pootung Middle School staged "The Awakening of Poland," the First Commercial School had a vivid description of a secret society known as "The Gang with Three Mouths" while the Society for Local Government produced the "Mirror of Youth." Some selection of Quisan songs were also rendered by the Chun Hsuih Hui.

The Association of Military Arts gave an exhibition between 2 and 3 o'clock and the Chin Woo Athletic Association followed the program with an attractive display of boxing and fenc-

LORD CECIL DISCUSSES BRITISH RAIL STIKE

American Ambassador Replies To Address Delivered At Luncheon

(Reuter's Service)

London, October 8.—Lord Robert Cecil, speaking at an American Press luncheon in London today, described the railway strike as a most serious phenomenon and urged the avoidance of class antagonism. He emphasised that the status of labor must be changed.

Mr. J. W. Davis, the American Ambassador, drew attention to the good feeling displayed during the strike, which was a great promise to the people of the civilised world. The attitude of the people, he said, had demonstrated love of law and order and determination to preserve order. For this the whole of civilisation would thank the English people.

Hope of China Is Students, Says Bishop W. R. Lambuth

Churchman Born In Shanghai 65 Years Ago Here For Conference Sees Birth Of New Spirit

Shanghai for the last few days has been entertaining one of her native sons, Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, born here in 1854, just before the Battle of Muddy Flat, which was the first time in history that British and American sailors fought shoulder to shoulder in a common cause.

We must have been fairly drab and bleak, and muddy and dreary in those long-gone days, but we were an exciting place to live in then, as we are now, although now we are all dressed up and aristocratic. These at least, are the views of the Bishop, who has come back to look us over every now and then in the 65 years that have elapsed since he first came to see us.

He says he has found his visit exciting and interesting and that he would have liked to make a long stay with us. Unfortunately he has received a cable telling nim of Mrs. Lambuth's illness at home and is now making arrangements to sail away again, immediately after the China Conference of the M. E. Church, South, which is to be held in Huchow next week.

Probably few persons ever knew China better or were in better position to note the changes that have taken place in this country in one brief life-time. When Bishop Lambuth's father, the Rev. J. W. Lambuth, set foot on Shanghai soil a gun was thrust into his hands and he was ordered to take his place on guard. The native city was in the hands of the "Red Heads," a band from the South who, while claiming to be Taiping rebels, were not. The real Taipings were entrenched outside the city, and not far off, on Soochow creek, were the Imperial troops.

Sent Aboard Gunboat

Bishop Lambuth remembers as a small boy being sent aboard a British gun-boat together with all the other children and women, the Chinese having turned on all foreigners owing to a wild rumor that the foreigners were kidnapping Chinese children. With the women and children safe, the men were able to hold the small district that was then the international settlement.

Part of his schooling as a boy was in Shanghai and part in America. Later he was graduated in medicine from Vanderbilt University in Nashville, followed with work in Bellevue Hospital, New York, in connection with the University of New York. Still later he took further medical training in Edinburgh. It was Bishop Lambuth together with Dr. W. H. Park who founded the Soochow hospital in 1882. He remained there for a number of years and then was sent to Japan with his father where they opened a mission in Kobe. The boys' school, that they opened in 1887 with 12 pupils, has now grown to a college of over 1,000 students and the girls' school at Hiroshima which began with seven now has an enrollment of 950.

Made Many Trips

Some years later he was recalled to the United States where he was made secretary of the Board of Missions. From that time for many years his trips were to Mexico, Cuba and South America. In 1911 he was elected bishop and soon after departed for the interior of the Belgian Congo, Africa. Bishop Lambuth's statement of conditions in Africa is interesting, even though he has since been engaged in equally exciting enterprises in France and South America. The young King Albert immediately upon coming to the throne had put a stop to the practise of farming out the taxes, which was the root of the Congo abuses. He also stopped all revenues coming from the Congo to the Belgian state and had the money turned back for developing and helping the Congo people.

Passenger travel to America in 1860 as experienced by the small boy the bishop contrasts sharply with that today. His first trip to his parents' home was by sailing vessel around Cape of Good Hope, 132 days on the water. And there were "weevils" in the hard-tack and "wiggle-tails" in the drinking water and drinking water was none too plentiful. Except when it rained the passengers were all rationed in the matter of water. This drinking water, which was warm and smelled badly, was kept on deck in barrels and it was dolled out in long-handled dippers that were inserted through the bung, the only opening.

It was on the return trip by the same route a few years later that the boy witnessed a strange encounter. The ship stopped at the island of Timour and a Malay chief came aboard to pay his respects. The captain was a small man while the mate, who was new in that part of the world, was very large. Naturally the chief mistook the larger man to be the more important and, after the fashion of his people, advanced to "rub noses."

The captain understood that form of salutation but the mate did not and when the chief attempted to rub his nose he knocked him down. The Malay was greatly angered and drew a dagger. Only the quick action of the captain in knocking it out of his hand with a telescope averted bloodshed. The affair, however, was patched up, apologies exchanged and later that day when the mate returned the call he was

DECIDES IT WILL DEFEND FRONTIER OF FATHERLAND

Issues Proclamation To All Civilised Peoples, Stating Position

POLITICS IN DEAL

Opposing Entente Pressure, It Also Opposes The Russian Terror

NEW DIFFICULTIES

Dangerous And Involved Situation Created By Von Der Goltz

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, October 9.—The German Free Corps of Courland has issued a proclamation to "the German Fatherland and all civilised peoples" in which it says that notwithstanding the orders of the German Government issued "under pressure from the entente," the Corps will remain at the front to protect the German frontier against the Bolshevists.

A semi-official announcement issued in Berlin says that as a result of the Government's appeal to the troops in the Baltic provinces transports are continually coming home, but that part of the troops "are still hesitating."

The foregoing telegram indicates a further change in a situation that is constantly becoming more absorbing. Recent dispatches have told of the recall of von der Goltz who was in command of the troops in the Baltic District and of his efforts to get his troops to obey him: also, that another general had been sent to replace him. A dispatch to The New York Times, from Berlin, dated early in September said:

Camouflaging Is Seen

Several messages have appeared, however, about the troops attempting to convey a reassuring impression as to their attitude. Thus, although it is admitted by practically all Socialist and Liberal sections of the press—and the militarist press has been ominously silent about the whole business—that the troops have committed excesses and done nothing to make Germany loved in the occupied territories, yet they are made to appear more as a happy-go-lucky army, intent on retaining what it has, than anything else. We are told that they are having an easy, comfortable life in Lettland and do not wish to give it up. We are told that they know nothing about politics and are concerned only with their own prospects of employment after demobilisation. We are told that they enjoy their present life so much that they are beyond even their officers' control and are not to be depended upon to take part in a counter-revolution.

But this, even if it is true, is only camouflaging the real question now at issue, which is, What was the political motive behind the formation of this army, and what political motives are now prompting its leaders? For that everything about this army is political is now admitted by the whole Liberal press. The Vossische Zeitung says the reasons for the Baltic adventure had nothing to do with the desires of the soldiers, but were of a purely political nature, and, going much beyond its ostensible object of repelling the Bolshevist invasion, the whole Baltic expedition, according to this journal, was simply a continuation of the Baltic policy initiated during the war and an effort to interfere with the self-determination of the Baltic peoples.

Has Other Critics

Vorwarts, too, which is a Government organ, is among those who reproach the Baltic policy as being "all wrong." It says the initial mistake was made when the Baltic junkers were allowed to raise a volunteer army for the defense of the Baltic provinces. This army was recruited simultaneously with the imperial army, so that confusion existed in the public mind regarding the status of the two armies and the junkers were able to use their army for purposes which did not serve the interests of the German Government.

Indeed, it is now openly admitted that the whole policy of this army, as conducted by von der Goltz and his junkers, was simply one of land-grabbing, and we find even such a paper as the Berliner Tageblatt seriously advising the troops to evacuate the stolen land only because its retention will lead to civil war.

But a peculiarly nasty twist is given to the story by the publication in the Freiheit of a secret army order issued by von der Goltz July 31 last. According to this order he was openly advocating to his command service with the Russian counter-revolutionary armies operating in the Baltic provinces. By itself this seems harmless, but it simply means that von der Goltz was ready to don any uniform which would secure for him possession of the lands which he craved.

The official Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, while not denying the authority of this army order, interprets it as meaning that individuals can accept service under the Russian counter-revolutionary Generals, but that this is no part of Germany's policy. As to that, it may be commented that von der Goltz is admittedly beyond his Government's control and would be prepared to negotiate on his own account.

Perhaps it is the knowledge of this Russian complication which makes clear to all sections of the press other than the militaristic how dangerous and involved is the situation which has been created by von der Goltz's scheming and makes them write with apprehension as to what may ensue.

Meanwhile it is right to add that all reports go to show that the Baltic Barons have been acting largely on their own account, that the German Government will not support the revolting troops in their insistence on any rights in Lettland, even under the first treaty with the Ulmanis Government, and that the press, both in Berlin and the provinces, is wrathful against von der Goltz.

Bishop Lambuth Talks On China

presented with a jewelled dagger in remembrance.

Trip Into Congo

Bishop Lambuth can tell exciting tales of his trip, 1,800 miles into the heart of the Congo. Oh that journey the party, for example, took chiefly salt as a bartering commodity. It was done up in one-pound packages and one packet to a native chief in the interior would buy any privileges that might be wanted. In the vicinity of some native villages, however, it took all their watchfulness to guard their store from goats. The animals appeared to be able to smell it.

At one place they encountered an ugly population of blacks, who they learned had a reputation for robbery. Inside of a few minutes, Bishop Lambuth discovered some three fights in progress between men of his party and villagers. He sent for the wife of the chief, the head man not being at home, and offered her a package of salt and a sash of gaudy cloth to settle the trouble. She did so, but wife number two then presented herself and the gift had to be repeated. They left the village very soon after.

Speaking of the changes in China, the Bishop is impressed greatly with the growth of the four cities that he has visited, Peking, Tientsin, Nanking and Shanghai. But his enthusiasm is greatest at the growth of the Chinese part in it, their power of organisation.

"They are learning team-work," said he yesterday. "China's weakness has been her almost fatal lack of unity. That, coupled with this new militarism make up the real dangers for China.

"Until this visit I never saw the soldiers along the railroads everywhere as now. That is something new and it is not natural to China. I don't think this people will permit it to dominate them for long. China has a great future. Her people are capable of anything, whether intellectual or physical. They can live anywhere, they can stand any climate, and they have the power of patience beyond any people known. They can live on less and save more. Christian education means much in their future for it will help the Chinese to the unselfish leadership that they need. It is really selfishness that is, at bottom, responsible for China's difficulties. It has been eating the heart out of the country. It has got into the officials.

Student Movement Propitious

"Only in the student movement do I see a different spirit. There is the hope of China. A few days ago the students held a mass meeting on the Recreation grounds. I was there and heard their speakers. You remember, the authorities barred the way and the students went over the fence and held their meeting, anyway. Those speeches to me were remarkable. There was a young woman from Tientsin who spoke with tremendous power and earnestness. Let me translate two of her statements almost exactly as she made them: 'If we are united in spirit we can accomplish anything.' Isn't that the real message to China? And the other one: 'My parents were opposed to my entering the student movement but my country comes first!' This is the beginning of that wonderful development of Chinese women that will re-make this country."

Roads Are Populous

The roads between the Settlements and the grounds were crowded all day. In view of the congestion of traffic the French Tramway Company not only increased its Pont St. Catherine cars, but switched those on service between Marche de L'Est and West Gate for use between West Gate and Pont St. Catherine.

The Nanyang Brothers Tobacco Company served tea and refreshments and distributed their popular cigarettes to the people at the Public Recreation Grounds.

Chapei Chinese held a separate celebration at the office of the Benevolent Association. The raising of the national flag, firing of guns, boys scouts drill and parade constituted the program.

During the night lantern processions in Nantao and Chapei by schools and organisations were numerous, besides a huge one organised by the program committee of the Public Recreation Club. All kinds of legends appropriate to the occasion were inscribed on the lanterns.

Lantern Procession

A lantern procession starting at Boone and North Szechuen Roads at 7 o'clock last night traversed North Szechuen, Tiendong, North Honan, Honan, Peking, Shanse, North Soochow, North Honan and Range Roads back to North Szechuen Road. About 300 marched headed by a band and details of police from both Hongkew and Central Stations.

Thousands followed the paraders and the line of march was one continuous round of cheers while firecrackers were fired all along the route.

Other smaller impromptu lantern processions were also seen at various parts of the Settlement.

BIG RECEPTION GIVEN AT FOREIGN BUREAU

Commemoration Exercises Are Attended By Gathering Of Shanghai Notables

A big reception was given yesterday at the Bureau of Foreign Affairs by Commissioner Yang Tcheng and the Committee of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce. Consular officials, police officers, the Local Chinese officials and other notables attended. Mr. Yang Tcheng, Mr. Barnes Moss, Commercial Advisor to the Chinese Government, Mr. Chu Pao-san, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. S. K. Chen, and Mr. N. T. Yang, Secretaries of the Bureau, formed the receiving line.

At 11 o'clock, the Chinese Company, S.V.C., was inspected by Commissioner Yang and Mr. Chu, Mr. Yang gave an appropriate address, which was interpreted by Mr. Chang Nieh-yuin, English Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. The company was under the command of Captain Grayrigge.

Mr. Yang's speech was as follows:

"Major Pilcher, Captain Grayrigge, Officers and Men of the Chinese Company:—It gives me great pleasure to inspect your company on this auspicious occasion of celebrating the anniversary of our Republic. It is the first time I see you as a company today, but of your achievements I have heard before this on more than one occasion.

"I understand that your company was formed some thirteen years ago as the result of efforts made by Mr. Yu Ya-chang, Mr. Yuen Heng-kee and the late Mr. Woo Kee-may your President and Vice-presidents, and in conjunction with the assiduous and energetic training of Captain Grayrigge and Lieutenants Zi and Woo the company has been created in its spirits today.

"You gentlemen show a martial spirit and smartness, you are business talents on whom is placed the burden of soldiers, and you truly form a model for the Chinese Young Man. When the S.V.C. was formed the Chinese Company had not come into being and when your company was organised we were obliged to the Municipal Council at the time who acted in accordance with the true principle of "Omnia juncta in Uno" and showed implicit sympathy and sincerity with us.

"You were at first formed necessarily under some restrictions, but after the Great Revolution in 1911 and several local disorders when you shouldered your arms in the protection of the Settlements and rendered good service on every occasion of mobilisation, you won popular appreciation and have been accorded practically all privileges. This must redound to your honor as well as to that of the Republic which I feel I have the good fortune to share.

"Shanghai is a trading center where foreigners and Chinese reside, where the Municipal administration is international, hence the organisation of the S.V.C. and in this the Chinese Company as a unit should find a place. In reflecting upon the formation of the corps it dates back to the year 1854 since which time it has greatly expanded with the growth of the port so that you have the British, American, Italian, Portugueses, Japanese, Customs, Maritime, Light Horse, Artillery and other companies and these with your company, the Chinese company, makes the corps a complete one.

"Your Commandant, Major Trueman, and Director of Infantry, Major Pilcher, have been connected for many years with the corps which has rendered signal service in maintaining peace and good order during any disturbance in Shanghai and to them I express my appreciation and respect.

"Your Commander, Captain Grayrigge, has served in his post for over ten years and in directing Mr. Zi, Mr. Woo and the non-commissioned officers has been untiring in his work in the training of you men and building up the company. On parades and mobilisation you have turned out in large numbers, almost winning a leading place.

"In musketry you have achieved fair results and at a recent competition you won the British Cup, the last example of your progress for which I cannot but express admiration. I hope that you will henceforth continue to maintain your esprit de corps and cultivate your company's vital spirits. It is also my confident and earnest hope that the success and reputation of your company may be increased day by day."

Three Leap To Escape Fire And Are Hurt

Three men were hurt in jumping from upper windows in an early morning fire at H57-61 Hoopeh Road yesterday. They were sent to the hospital. A fourth escaped unharmed. The building housed the E. Because of the close crowding of other buildings, it was a particularly difficult blaze to fight but was skilfully handled by the Central division, assisted by the Sinza brigade.

If You Want MILEAGE

Firestone

Non-Skid is the Answer

Mileage Firestone factories are always working ahead of the times, never satisfied with even Firestone's best. Unusual freedom from tyre trouble, more comfort and easier riding are all part of this new improved tyre.

MORE Mileage In Firestone Tyres there is an extra amount of cushion stock and more rubber between fabric layers. This means greater wear resistance, as each layer is protected imfrointernal friction.

MOST Mileage Performance is proving the superiority of Firestone Tyres at every point, making your shilling go farther, because your tyres run longer by miles—and Miles—and MILES.

Mr. Morriss Wins Kiangwan Classic On Yellow Diamona

Crowds In Joyous Mood Throng Race Course As International Recreation Club Stages Holiday Program---Many Close Finishes

The second day of the 57th Meeting of the International Recreation Club attracted another huge crowd to Kiangwan yesterday. The race course was profusely decorated with the national colors and bunting and the gay attire of the spectators and the conspicuous five barred flags gave a real festival atmosphere. Ten races were staged.

The Commemoration Stake, the principal event of the day, was won by Yellow Diamond, Mr. H. E. Morriss up, by half a length over Three of Spades, ridden by Mr. William Hill. Triumphant Star, Mr. T. L. Hu riding finished third.

The closest race of the day was staged in the last event, the Nil Desperandum Plate, when Spotted Sand surprised the spectators by ousting Sideway in the stretch by a neck, incidentally paid $41.20 to each of his 156 backers. Mr. C. T. Chu rode the winner and Mr. H. F. Hu was on Sideway. Sir Lamerock, the hot favorite, trotted in two lengths behind Sideway.

Another spectacular attraction was the Village Selling Plate. King of Hearts, ridden by Mr. H. F. Hu, took a long lead at the start and maintained it almost the entire course. But both the Hornbill and the Specialist stretched and finished in the order named. Mr. W. G. Crokam was jockey for the winner and Mr. H. Tomono rode the second pony.

Mr. Frank R. Vida took a good lead on Roseway in the Grand Stand Stakes. At half distance, Winsome Dahlia, Mr. Morriss riding, overtook the first pony, but Mr. Burkill, riding Railway, and Mr. Vida, forced the race in the stretch, and Railway won from Roseway by a short neck. Railway paid $21.50 for win. Revenge, Mr. A. W. Brun up, was third.

Honors for the jockeys were well distributed. Mr. C. R. Burkill and Mr. W. G. Crokam were tied for first place, having registered two wins each. Mr. Frank R. Vida was a good second. He had one first and two seconds to his credit. Mr. H. E. Morriss, Mr. C. C. Boyd and Mr. A. J. P. Heard also fared well.

placed aboard a ship bound for Shanghai.

In Shanghai the son is a beach-comber. He seeks solace in an opium den and there finds the girl he loved in San Francisco. She had followed him to the East and in despair at not finding him, she turned to the drug.

The sight of the girl awakens old memories and he resolves to "come back." He takes her to Honolulu, meets success on a sugar plantation and later returns to his father. The latter has tested him, tests his son's faith in the girl and is satisfied.

Albert Morrison as the son, Mr. Frawley as the father, and Miss Beatrice Prentice as Marcel, the girl, have powerful leading parts in the production. Mr. Barton and Miss Fletcher have delightful comedy roles.

"The Man Who Came Back," will be played only tonight. The advance booking has been large.

Polly With A Past

"Polly With a Past" was presented by the Frawley Company again last night, and the players' rendition of the quick, snappy lines of this farce comedy was better than at any previous performance.

Married Men Lead Single Cricketers

The Married Men lead the Bachelors in their annual cricket match on the Shanghai Cricket Club's ground yesterday. The wedded ones scored 238 all told. The single men got 106 for seven wickets.

Barrett, who spoiled those of the married ranks, collected 148, the highest score this season. He was missed by Fox after scoring one, but the catch was a difficult one, and from then onwards never gave another chance till that by which he was out through the medium of Hansell at third man. Barrett in his innings collected 21 fours and four threes.

The game started off with Hayward and Deeks taking the batting against Hansell and Bhoora. Hayward went first, caught by Hansell in the slips after making seven. Barrett joined Deeks and the latter had to take the shelter of the pavilion through a ball from Hansell which had him guessing all the way.

Hansell's second brilliant catch disposed of Moule, the score board at this stage showing 17-3-0. Read joined Barrett and when tiffin time came the score had mounted to past the 80 mark, Barrett having made over 50.

After eats the married men carried on and the fourth wicket fell at 138, Read going out with 36 to his credit collected in one of the soundest innings seen for a long time.

Walter Wilson, with 12 against his name, was the only other batsman to reach double figures and the Bachelors had to face 238, due mainly to the Married Men's captain.

Fielding on the part of the Bachelors was great. Hansell with three for 37 in 21 overs, and with seven maidens, was by far the pick of the bowlers, Clifford came next with 3 for 45. Barnes, who for the match has turned bachelor, was more than useful behind the sticks allowing only one bye and four leg byes past him. The extra tally against Mr. Extras was a wide bowled by Yates.

With all the bowlers, the Bachelors started out in the hopes that it would not take long to get the requisite score but they were figuring without Read and when stumps were drawn had only collected 106 for the fall of seven wickets.

Fox, with 27, was the highest bat on the Single Un's side, Thomson and J. M. Pearson coming next with 17 each. Read in 17 overs captured 5 wickets for 39 runs.

The game will continue today. Tiffin will be served in the S. C. C. pavilion. Play will start at 1:30 p.m.

Harriers Run Tomorrow

In view of other attractions this afternoon the Fixture Committee of the Shanghai Harriers Club has decided to hold a training run for members tomorrow morning starting from the Club's headquarters, 3 Kiangwan Road, at 10 o'clock. There will be both fast and slow squads in charge of the Club's captain and vice-captain and the run will be one of about four miles.

Whizz Bangs Lose, 3-0

The showing of the Whizz Bangs in their initial bow to Shanghai footballers yesterday afternoon against the Shanghai Football Club on the latter club's ground was very disappointing.

The S. F. C. had it all over their opponents and if it were not for the valuable assistance rendered by two sailors from one of the British gunboats in port, and Bertes the S. F. C's goalie, the defeat would have been much greater than 3-0.

For the winners, Drake was responsible for two tallies in the second half, and the first score came from Olsen, due to a very neat pass from Forshaw.

Play throughout was far from league style. For the winners Tonkin at back was as good as ever. McLean between the sticks showed that he has not lost the art of goal keeping. W. J. Brown was by far the best in the half line whilst in the offensive Drake, Forshaw, Olsen and Brodie all showed to advantage.

Of the seven Whizz Bangs in the field Begg was easily the star doing the work over again of the halves and the forwards together.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

What is Castoria?

CASTORIA is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Comfort—The Mother's Friend.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper of genuine Castoria

"My patients invariably praise the action of your Castoria." W. W. TURVER M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.

"During my medical practice I know of several cases where your Castoria was prescribed and used with good results. K. MORGNER, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"Your Castoria is certainly the greatest remedy for children I know of. I know no other proprietary preparation which is its equal." B. S. SCHWARTZ, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

"I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children." J. W. DINSDALE, M. D., Chicago, Ill.

"Your Castoria is the best remedy in the world for children and the only one I use and recommend." AGNES V. SWETLAND, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy." H. D. BENNER, M. D., Philadelphia, Pa.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

Banking Service with AMERICA —direct and personal

EXPORTERS or importers now engaged in, or thinking of, trade with America would do well to consider not only the special nature of our facilities, but also the personal interest we take in every one of our customers' transactions.

First of all, we offer direct banking service—without intermediary dealings, or unnecessary delays.

Equally important is our personal service. Every transaction is followed through, both here and in America, by our own representatives with a personal interest, the value of which is evident in the service rendered.

May we talk with you about America?

Customs Notification
No. 928.

With reference to Customs Notification No. 922, withdrawing from 1st October, 1919, the Special Bond privilege instituted during the European War for Transhipment cargo, the Public is now informed that in order to meet present requirements and difficulties arising from lack of tonnage, delays, etc., the following procedure has been instituted for a period of six months, from 1st October, 1919, to 31st March, 1920:

Bona fide transhipment cargo from outports destined for Europe or America may remain at the importing vessel's wharf, without having to be passed through the Customs, for a period of 30 days over and above the already prescribed 15 days. A further extension up to another 30 days may be granted on payment of an extension fee of Hk. Tls. 20 for every 5 days over and above the 45 days now granted free of charge. After this last period the cargo, if not transhipped, must be imported.

This privilege is granted only to cargo which has been declared to be "For transhipment abroad" at the original port of shipment.

On expiry of the six months' period above mentioned, i.e., on the 1st April, 1920, transhipment cargo will be treated in accordance with normal regulations: if not transhipped within 15 days it must be imported.

IMPARTIAL & PROGRESSIVE

SHANGHAI, OCTOBER 11, 1919

The Japanese-American Situation

SENATOR Borah has been telling the Japanese that the United States won't fight Japan over the Shantung question. Not in his opinion, at least. At the same time when the question was put to him: "Cannot you rely on Japan's pledge that Shantung will be returned to China?" he replied: "No I cannot rely on Japan's pledge." At this point, if we may conceive of Japan and the United States as two men conversing in the street, there would be a fight.

Furthermore, the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate has adopted a resolution recommending to the Senate that the German rights in Shantung be taken from Japan and awarded to China. If the Senate as a whole takes this view, the Treaty of Peace and the League of Nations Covenant will be in a bad way and the relations between the United States and Japan brought to a crisis.

So much for that.

Former Senator Burton of Ohio, who is visiting Japan, told the Japanese in a speech delivered on October 1, that "The objections raised in California to the Japanese are ascribed to racial difference, but this is only an excuse. The real reason is the demand of a powerful element to monopolise the labor of the state and for purposes of political expediency. The California land laws are simply political war cries."

The Senator, as we have noted, is from Ohio, which has no Japanese labor question on its hands, and knows very little about the actual state of feeling existing in California not only but in Oregon and Washington as well. The Senator was making his speech at a meeting held under the joint auspices of the American Peace Society and the Japan Peace Society where the guests were supposed to sit down and be happy little brothers together, and to stand up and say pleasant little nothings to one another.

But why he should go so far afield in describing the Pacific Coast situation with regard to the Japanese, just in order to be pleasant, we must leave to the imagination of our readers. As a matter of fact there is nothing to be gained for America, for Japan or for peace by an attempt such as this is to belittle or misrepresent the real feeling of the American people who reside on our Western Coast.

The American farmer cannot compete with the Japanese farmer because he refuses to resort to the methods of the Japanese farmer; also Japanese labor is on a cheaper and lower economic scale than American. Again, we cannot assimilate the Japanese any more than we have been able to assimilate the negro. On the other hand, we can assimilate any of the white races. Therefore the Japanese, who multiply faster than we do, constitute a strange growth on our Western Coast which is constantly becoming more irritating and painful.

In the State of Washington they have set up their own schools, with Japanese teachers, and the Japanese language is used exclusively. On September 2, the Washington state officials were instituting court proceedings with the object of closing up these schools. On the same date, a Seattle paper warned its readers that, providing the Japanese invasion was not stopped, the political control of the State would pass to them within 10 to 15 years. In the face of this warning, the Senator would have the Japanese believe that the Pacific Coast is not excited about the matter.

The Senator, however, could not avoid saying that "the good relations which should exist between Japan and the United States are to some extent hampered by differences of race, language and customs which tend to create misunderstandings."

And that: "No nation will profit by endeavoring to grasp the economic resources of a country by means of spheres of influence or any other means. All must have an equal chance."

And further along: "My advice regarding California is, first, to avoid excitement, and second, not to take too seriously the loud talk and attitude of the jingoes. The talk of war between Japan and the United States is futile and absurd. The mutual advantages of trade make war impossible."

Whereupon, Baron Sakatani, speaking for Japan, got up and stated the position of Japan on the California question in the following language:

"As this is an occasion on which we may all be perfectly frank in expressing our views, I should like to say that one of the things which serve to irritate the Japanese mind is the frequent introduction into the California Legislature of anti-Japanese measures. It seems to the Japanese that the Gentlemen's Agreement is sufficient, because this agreement is taken seriously by the Japanese, and honestly kept as a covenant of international faith. If the Americans demand something more than this, it is most difficult for the Japanese to understand, even those who know most about America.

"If America should take away the acquired rights of the Japanese who have taken up their residence in America, or of those who have been born in America, we may say it is cruelty. Morality and humanity will not permit such acts. Knowing that Senator Burton believes in a truthful exchange of views, I am stating these things somewhat abruptly, without taking time to explain all their bearings. I do so with the hope that it may be of service to the Senator in making up his conclusions as to the things which are necessary in order to establish on the most permanent foundations the truest friendship between our two countries."

We have italicised the words: "Which are necessary," in the above, because they are important. Baron Sakatani evidently means that there can be no true friendship between the two nations unless the Pacific Coast, and finally, the United States, shall yield on this question, which was the one he was discussing.

Thus we have it from one Senator that the United States won't fight over Shantung, while at the same moment, the committee of which he is a member is voting to overturn the Peace Conference and award Shantung to China. While the other Senator is glibly telling Japan not to worry about the Pacific Coast matter. Those Pacific Coast people are a lot of jingoes and the whole thing is nothing but a political war cry and nobody in the United States will go to war about it!

Well, probably they are right insofar as they say there won't be a war over these important issues. The League of Nations may prevent such a war; and then again, the fact that the United States is twice as strong militarily as Japan is may prevent it. But if the position were reversed, and Japan were twice as strong as the United States, we are inclined to think there would be a war.

A Review Of The Situation In Britain

By Alfred G. Gardner
(Celebrated Editor of The London Daily News, Organ of the British Liberal Party)

The announcement that our coal is to cost us more has given the public the worst jolt it has had since the war ended. In the sort of alarm it spread abroad it recalled the evil days of last year. It recalled them by the menace and uncertainty it shed over the future—by the feeling that events had got out of hand, and that all the landmarks of secure life were disappearing under the flood of incalculable economic forces. The domestic aspect of the matter is grave enough. It casts the shadow of the coming winter over every modest household.

But its implications are still more serious. Coal is the basis of our trade. It governs the price of everything which is produced by power. The six-shilling rise will not be limited to coal. It will be reflected in the standard of prices all around. It sets up a new level of relation between money and commodities, between the symbol and the reality. Money was never so abundant, and it was never so valueless. A pound is now only the equivalent of 8s. before the war. The rise in the price of coal means a further fall in the value of paper. Sir John Bradbury's signature, like an etching, becomes less valuable the more often it is printed.

Coal And Trade

But it is not the internal situation only which is affected by Sir Auckland Geddes's announcement. We may leave aside for the moment the question of whether the rise is unavoidable or excessive. The public has grown so accustomed to government by stunts and artifices that it suspects every move of the politicians. It connects the announcement with the eve of the Swansea election and the question of nationalisation.

It remembers the 2s. 6d. rise which Sir Eric Geddes gave to the colliery owners during the war, and which turned out to be a gift of millions to the prosperous part of the trade in order that the low-grade mines could work at a profit. It was a priceless example of the operation of protection, and the consumer (as usual) paid. The public will want to know how much of the present 6s. rise is due to the Sankey award, and how much to the same evil practice of making uneconomic mines prosperous by putting up the price all round.

It is with the effects, however, that we are concerned here. And in regard to the external trade of the country, no one needs to be told that those effects must be disastrous. Our export trade in coal has been one of the chief bulwarks of our commercial prosperity. It is threatened on the one side by the impoverishment of Europe, on the other by the diversion during the war of South American orders to the United States, where coal is nearer the surface, thicker in seam and more easily worked.

In any case, it is doubtful whether we should have recovered the South American trade. With the serious jump in the cost of production it is now practically impossible, and the loss here, as elsewhere, is not confined to the diminution of exports. It will be reflected in shipping, and the cost of commodities from South America. When a ship which had brought mutton or wheat from the Argentine could take coal as ballast on the outgoing journey the fact lessened the price of the mutton and wheat. But we have no substitute for coal as ballast. There is no other commodity that we export which has the essential of bulk as well as high value.

Wages And Output

If the sensation created by the coal announcement is exceptional it is not merely because coal touches us all more directly and immediately than most things, but because it is an index of the universal tendency. In every direction prices are mounting and the consumer (who happens to be all of us) is being crushed in the scramble of competitive interests for the biggest share of the general product.

Labor, furious with the profiteer, eager to catch up with the soaring cost of things and armed with organised power for securing its demands, puts up its terms, and the manufacturer passes the increase on to the public with a comfortable margin for himself, and the position is worse than before. Labor comes back with new demands which are met in the same way and passed on in the same way, and so the vicious circle is traced. And meanwhile the unhappy professional and fixed income class, who have nothing with which to bleed the consumer and no power of menace with which to compel attention to their claims, grow more helpless and more impoverished.

But that is not all. The instability of prices and the disintegrating atmosphere of things make the calculations of industry timid and uncertain and check that full revival of trade which alone can restore economic health and financial stability. The upward tendency of prices is matched by a downward tendency in production, due partly to the transition of the industrial machine from war purposes to peace purposes, partly to the profound reaction of the industrial world from five years of unprecedented strain, partly to the mischievous effects of profiteering and its associated evil of diminished output.

The notorious profits of trade are answered by a disposition to look for redress in higher wages and lowered output. The miner aims at a certain standard of comfort. When he attains that with less output his tendency is to be content and to reduce his output. And so with other trades.

And coupled with this human tendency there is the fatal heresy that lowered production means more work for other hands. It does not. It means still higher prices, still more impediments to the general recovery, still more grit in the laboring machine. In the end this reacts, not only on the general public, but on the separate interest which seems momentarily to profit, but most ultimately shares the consequences of a common evil.

Parliament Is Inactive

In the confused struggle, in any case an inevitable sequel to the catastrophe of the war and to the collapse of the artificial and uneconomic structure maintained during the war, there is no lead from Parliament. It is crowded with vested interests concerned primarily to get the largest measure of private advantage from the general upheaval.

Government in any coherent sense has ceased to exist. There is no Cabinet to survey the whole vast field of tendencies and to bring those tendencies into organic relation—nothing but a vast system of water-tight bureaucracies working from no general principle, agreed on no policy, each spending without check or supervision, with a chief in the background whose mind on any subject no one knows and who makes fleeting incursions into the distracted world of affairs that leave it more embarrassed more undecipherable than before.

A serious sense of fatalism and helplessness pervades public life. The philosophy of the ostrich, which hides its head in the sand and thinks that if it does not see it will not be seen, is the prevailing note. The story of the wasted millions of the national shipyards is followed by the exposure of the inconceivable folly and worse of the Slough depot. They pass by almost without comment in the press—without a word of indignant protest in Parliament. No one is punished; no one is even censured. Even the Committee on Public Expenditure has ceased to exist. Parliament is swept blindly forward on the floodtide of prodigality, and the War Office issues a placard showing how miserable is the condition of the civilian worker compared with that of the man who joins the army and has a good time out of the public purse.

Muddle Over "Control"

Not least among the causes of the inflation of prices, which is at the root of the present discontent, is the muddle over "control." Control is a many-sided word. It means different things in different connections. It is good in one case, bad in another. In the present unprecedented condition of the world, with universal famine in one hemisphere and the necessary supplies in another, it is obvious that there must be regulation if one country is not to starve while another flourishes. The control of selling prices, too, based on costings—a system which did incalculable service to the consumer during the war—is as necessary today as it ever was, and is just as applicable to the conditions of peace as it was to the conditions of war. Control of distribution also is necessary. It abolished the queue, and so long as uncertainty as to the sufficiency of supplies continues it ought to be continued. What happens when control is prematurely lifted we may see in the case referred to yesterday—that of lard, which had changed hands five times between the sale by the producer and the purchase by the shopkeeper, with the result that the price to the consumer was nearly doubled to enrich five speculative middlemen, none of whom had seen or touched it. And the case of linseed oil, which in a few weeks leaped up from $290.00 to over $500.00, is equally full of warning.

But while control in certain of its aspects is as necessary today as ever there are directions in which it is one of the main causes of the inflation of process and the obstruction to trade. It is being used to close the ports against the free operation of trade, not in the interests of the consumer, but in the interests of the manufacturer.

Tariff reform has got its foot in the door and at a time when the free action of economic forces within the widest possible limit is more necessary than it has ever been the policy of creating artificial scarcity is deliberately adopted. In Sir Auckland Geddes's phrase we are engaged in "nursing the baby" of British trade back to life. What British trade wants above everything is fresh air and the removal of every possible impediment to its natural activity. We are not nursing it back to life so much as smothering it in its sleep.

The Secret Of The Box

And to make its recovery less likely, the business mind of the country is kept in a condition of nervous expectancy as to the contents of Sir Auckland's mysterious box which is to be unlocked at some future date and to reveal what is to happen to us. Why is the country to be kept in this uncertainty about its future? What has Parliament descended to that it remains silent under this abrogation of its sovereign right to know and to decide what the policy of the country shall be in regard to its most vital interests?

The probability is that there is no policy in this matter as in others—that it is being held in suspense to see what happens in the political world and to decide as events dictate. But the effect of this opportunism on the condition of trade and on the financial condition of the country is equally disastrous in either case.

In this connection there is a widespread belief that anotner election is imminent. This speculation may be wrong, though no one would care to predict a long life for the present discredited and corrupt House of Commons. But the point is that the atmosphere of mystery and uncertainty, doubt and fear which envelops the public life and activities of the country is fatal to the recovery of healthy conditions and a confident state of mind. It is confidence that must be restored if the national machine is to function properly and a check is to be given to the public and private prodigality which is responsible for the alarming inflation of prices. We need drastic economy in all our ways. We need the sternest measures with profiteering and the maximum production from labor.

The cause of the present discontent is that the interests of the consumer are being sacrificed in the scramble for higher profits on the one side and higher wages without higher production on the other. The danger is that this scramble will degenerate into a bitter class war. If that danger is to be avoided, the inspiration must come from a Government which will win back the confidence of the public in Parliamentary institutions, which will set the example of a rigorous public economy, which will stop corruption and bring the spending departments under the control of a determined treasury and which will deliver the country from the atmosphere of political necromancy into the plain daylight of facts, necessities and duties.

A Hint Of The Future

(From The Rocky Mountain News)

The very best way for the unofficial citizen of this country to help the official citizens reduce the high cost of living is to stop spending his money like a drunken sailor.

Rebellious Texas

His Own Worst Enemy

(From The Hartford Courant)

Ultimate Consumer incautiously gets in the way at every turn. Not only is he the victim of high prices, but, according to certain experts, he is the cause of them. He is a careless cuss, paying any sort of price for what he thinks he wants, although he may loudly complain about it afterward. He mightily hates to deny himself anything, and so he gets it in the neck quite hard and quite frequently.

A Column Of Verse

THREE POEMS
(From Contemporary Verse)

Walking At Night

[redacted]
Making him dream of the sound of mirth
That comes with the clearing breeze.

'Tis a rare and wondrous sight
To tramp the wet awhile
And watch the slow delight
Of the sun's first pallid smile,
And hear the meadows breathe again
And see the far woods turn to green
Drunk with the glory of wind and rain
And the sun's warm smile between!

I have made me a vagrant song,
For my heart is warm to the core,
And I'm glad, O glad that the night is long
For I travel the road once more,
And the dim trees beat the dark
And the swelling ditches moan,
With the joy of the singing, soaring lark
I travel the road, alone!

The Old Road

Road like a vein,
Tell me, where will you take me
Beyond the broad plain?
Will you mend me and make me
The merry-eyed, cherry-lipped gypsy again
Who followed your turning
Through the jovial patter of rain
Or the sun's ruddy burning?

Will you give me your cloud-mottled hills
Where the wheat nods and billows;
The brook that a shallow pool stills
At the feet of the willows?
And show me the meadows that dance
Mid the music of bees,
Or the shadows that hover and glance
To the laughter of trees?

Will you give me the longing for home
When the dark comes to daunt me?
The urge to go forward and roam
When the moon comes to haunt me?
The ricks in the gloom by the barn,
And the smell of the cattle;
The carters that pause for a yarn
Or go by with a rattle;

The hail and the halt, the goodwill
That they toss to the stranger?
The keen stabbing joy of the thrill
At the coming of danger?
Road like a warm living vein
Tell me where will you take me,
Beyond the broad plain?
Will you mend me, and make me
The merry-eyed, cherry-lipped gypsy again?

Outside And In

All the night long
A fine small snow was drifting,
Groping and sifting,
And the wind's song
Tore past, lamenting,
Lashing the frenzied trees until they raved.
The grass behaved
More wisely, and was soon contenting
Beneath a silence white,
Hearing no fury of the midnight's mood
Where the trees stood
In seeming fright,
Flinging into the air
The burden that the angry sky seemed bent,
With fixed intent,
On forcing them to bear.
Inside the house
Things moved as though made restless by the storm.
The hearth, still warm,
Enticed a mouse.

The chimney's moan
Joined with uneasy creakings everywhere,
Where some tense chair
Made itself known.

But when I rose to pull the window shut
I found no harm, save scattered on the floor
Beside the door,
The countless paper dolls the children cut.

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper (Registered Trade Mark.)

is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

The Lesson---By Mme. Lucie Delarue-Madrus

Translated By William L. McPherson

The poor woman had gone into country to nurse her heart's efs. It is a painful thing when e ends of itself, smoulders down ashes from weariness, from iety comes to a finish because two poles of attraction go dead and the current which used to flow between them no longer emits a spark.

Surely a violent rupture, with all its brutalities, is better than that!

What shall she do now to assuage her heart? Alone in the old country house, she finds no pleasure but that of reviving her bitter experiences. She counts them over, one by one, classifies them, studies them.

"Life! What is it for me now? I am no longer young. I am going to grow old soon. I had a husband, but I lost him. I had a lover, but I no longer care for him. Others have children. If I had even one! Others have friends. I am alone, forgotten. During the long years of my passionate attachment I narrowed my world; for other people are tiresome when one is really in love.

"I could cultivate some consoling art, as many do. I could paint, write or be a musician. But they didn't teach me anything when I was a girl. I am pretty—that is all. What is the object of being pretty? To love and to be loved. And my love is dead. I haven't even the recourse of religion. Can I still believe in God when I suffer so much and when everything is denied me? Moreover, the war has deprived me of a part of my income. I can't live as I used to. I have fewer servants. I have had to sell my auto. And that isn't all. I am neurasthenic. I have dizzy spells. My health is being undermined.

"That's how things stand now. As to the future, it is blacker still. I can see myself now, a lonely invalid, dependent on the care of servants, a melancholy old woman whose only concern is not to suffer too much, while others are surrounded by children and grandchildren to keep the heart warm even until death. What a chill I feel within me and about me! I wonder whether there is another woman on earth more forsaken and more unhappy than I am."

After drinking her tea, which a maid had just served in the salon she dried her eyes. The late springtime was so beautiful out there in the park that the crickets vibrated with joy and the birds couldn't keep silence. An elder tree balanced its white clusters to every little breeze that passed. The golden dandelion buttons in the grass plot shone in the sunlight. Bits of blue sky appeared above the heavy branches of the trees.

"What good is all this?" she thought.

She dried her eyes once more before buttering her tea cakes. It is frightful to live with a sob always in one's throat!

Pushing back the empty teacup, she got up. What should she do with herself through the rest of this long, bright day? Should she walk in the park with her little dog, as she had done the afternoon before?

"It is certain that I shall commit suicide one of these evenings"——

The servant gave her an umbrella and a wrap. The little white dog rushed ahead of her, happy to get out of doors.

"Alone with my dog"——

She warmed to the idea and began to weep again as she followed the garden path, until the dog, barking loudly, startled her out of her grief.

"That's R. There is some one behind the fence. An old woman. Some beggar, no doubt."

It was, indeed, a beggar. Bent, her arm in a sling, her white locks under the wreck of a bonnet, a man's shoes on her feet and rags about her body, she looked across the barrier, with eyes blinking in a face without form or color.

"Madam," she called softly.

And the other came, already opening her bag, while the little dog, scandalised, sniffed and growled.

"Madam," the voice continued, "would you be so very good as to give me a little help? I haven't had a bite to eat today."

The younger woman saw herself again before her tea and cakes.

"Here, my poor creature," she said, giving her a 5-sou piece.

Five sous! It is not the ordinary tariff. To the poor one gives one big sou. It is a convention.

"Oh! Thank you, my good lady," exclaimed the old woman, joyfully.

And as the other turned on her heel to continue her walk and her sighs, the beggar, before departing, murmured:

"Life is not always sweet, madam!"

She said this without whining and in a tone so grave that the promenader within the park stopped.

Then the old woman began to recount her misfortunes. Poor people do that very simply, for the benefit of the first comer. It is a privilege which they have and which, doubtless, solaces and consoles them.

"It is my arm," she said, "which is the worst of all. An automobile strike me one evening when I was sleeping on the side of the road. I was worn out and needed sleep. Think of it, madam. I have to support myself, at my age, after having had a husband and five children. My husband deserted me when I was still young, leaving the five children on my hands. I brought them up, nevertheless. One died of meningitis and one of consumption. A third disappeared during the war. The fourth is in prison. The fifth, who was a girl, ran away with a young man, who took her abroad.

"So I went to work again for myself. They gave me clothes to wash and I slept in the houses of those who employed me. But now, with this arm, I have to sleep outside, madam; and it is very hard in winter."

The young woman opened her mouth to respond. Shame reddened her face. Had she not been thinking just now of her own old age, and had she not judged it in advance to be perfectly lamentable?

The mendicant interrupted her in her burst of pity. Straightening up, smiling, with her countenance illuminated, she said:

"But it is wrong to get discouraged, madam. For some days my arm has been better. It is a good time of the year and the rains no longer drench me to the bone. And today you have given me this piece."

Then, with all her soul, she added this startling little sentence:

"For some time past God has been good to me."

The young woman had slowly bowed her head. She raised it and looked at the old mendicant. Then, feverishly rummaging in her bag, she emptied it of all the money it contained—some 20 franc notes and several pieces of silver.

"Take these," she said. "They are yours."

Dropping them in the one good hand of the astonished beggar woman, it seemed to her that she dropped with them all the afflictions of her heart.

Yanks See Humor In Archangel Cold

American soldiers, recently returned from service in Northern Russia, have brought back with them interesting impressions of people and things in Archangel and the surrounding country. An idea of what the American soldiers thought of Archangel, its people, customs and things in general is found in the American Sentinel, the newspaper published at Archangel by the American Red Cross.

Copies of the Sentinel which have reached Red Cross headquarters show that the Arctic weather was not severe enough to freeze the humor out of the soldiers or clog their rhyming apparatus. The following description of Archangel, pronounced by the editor of the Sentinal as "the best pen picture of the place written by an American soldier," proves that one of Uncle Sam's boys didn't permit the job to get on his nerves:

Description of Weather

"We are so far north that the doggone sun works only when it feels inclined to do so, and in that way it is like everything else in Russia. The moon isn't so particular, and comes up usually backwards, at any time of day or night, in any part of the sky, it having no set schedule, and often it will get lost and still be on the job at noon. Yes, we are so far north that 30 degrees below will soon be tropical weather for us, and they will have to build fires around both cows before they can milk them. Probably about next month some one will come around and say that we will be pulling out of here in a day or so, but then the days will be six months long.

"Now up here in this tough town there are 269,831 inhabitants, of which 61,329 are human beings and 208,502 are dogs. Dogs are of every description, from the poodle to the St. Bernard and from the wolfhound to the self-breed dachhound.

"The wind whistles across the Dvina like the Twentieth Century Limited passing Podunk and snowflakes are as numerous as retreating Germans were in France.

"We read in the Stars and Stripes that the boys in Italy had some tonguetwisters and brain-worriers, but listen to this. Centimes and sous and francs may be hard to count, but did you ever hear of a ruble or a kopec? A kopec is worth a tenth of a cent, and there are a hundred of them in a ruble. As you will see, that makes a ruble worth a dime, and, to make matters worse, all the money is paper, coins having gone out of circulation since the beginning of the mix-up. A kopec is the size of a postage stamp, a ruble looks like a cigar store certificate, a twenty-five ruble note resembles a porous plaster, and a 100-ruble note the Declaration of Independence.

"Every time you get on a street car (tramway) you have to count out sixty kopec for your fare, and most of us would rather walk than be jammed in the two by four busses and fish for the money. Before boarding a car each passenger usually hunts up a couple of five-gallon milk cans, a market basket or two, and a bag of smoked herring so that they will get their kopecs' worth out of the ride, besides making the atmosphere nice and pleasant for the rest of the passengers.

"When a soldier in search of a meal enters a restaurant, he says to the waitress, "Barishnia, zakazetie bifstek, pazalouista," which means, "An order of beefsteak, lady, please." You see, you always say, "barishnia," which really means "girl," and until a young lady is married she is always addressed in that manner. She will answer the hungry customer with, "Yah ochen sojalayn shtoo nas niet yestnik prepasov slechas," (a simple home cure for jockjaw,) meaning "I am sorry, but we are right out of food today."

"When a Russian meets another man he knows on the street, both lift their hats and flirt with each other. If they stop to talk they always shake hands, even if they haven't seen each other for fully twenty minutes. Then they simply must shake hands again when they leave. When a man meets a lady friend, he usually kisses her hand and shows how far he can bend over without breaking his suspenders.

"'Ah,' he will say, 'Yah ochen rad was veedet, kak vul pozavayetie?' which in the United States means, 'How do you do?' To which she will reply 'Blagadaru vas, yah ochen khorshaw,' or 'Very well, thank you.' It is the knockout. A fellow has to shake hands so much that some of us are getting the habit around the company."

Does Mind Speak To Mind Of World Beyond Grave?

Sir William Fletcher Barrett, Discussing That Question, Tells Of Remarkable Case Of Receipt Of Message From Dead Soldier

By Sir William Fletcher Barrett
(Leading British Scientist)

London, August 23.—If spirits can communicate with us and with one another, would it not be possible for human beings on earth to hold intercourse with one another in the same way?

It seems probable, as Swedenborg long ago asserted, that spirits communicate with each other through some process of though transference, or, as we call it, telepathy.

Language is an imperfect and clumsy instrument for transferring our ideas, and telepathy would be far preferable. But we do not know at present all the conditions upon which telepathy depends, and, therefore, we cannot use it at pleasure. It is possible future investigation of this subject may enable us to use telepathy. Doubtless, telepathy between minds here or beyond the veil is the true explanation of inspiration and the communion of saints in which all Christians believe.

But is not all spiritualistic inquiry unlawful and condemned by both the Jewish and Christian churches in all ages?

Every intelligent person, Christian or Jew, will agree with Lord Melvin, who said, "Science is bound to face fearlessly every problem which can fairly be presented to it."

Yes, science; but what about the man in the street?

You will find in my writings reiterated statements as to the folly and mischief of indiscriminate investigation in this obscure and difficult region. Unbalanced minds and untrained inquirers are pretty sure to come to grief. But all phenomena are legitimate subjects for scientific investigation.

Then you regard the matter as a branch of psychological science and not as a religion?

Quite so; psychical research will eventually by recognised in universities as a department of psychology. It may be (and in my opinion is) an aid to religion, proving, as many of us believe, the existence of an immaterial soul in man, which survives the death of the body.

Is there any similarity or otherwise between the conditions of this world and the invisible world beyond?

The great body of spiritualists in allied countries believe that the unseen world is very like the present world, only brighter and better.

Swedenborg, who was a true gifted seer, tells us that the spiritual world appears so like the present world that at first those who have passed over believe they are still on earth.

How far from our own world is the unseen spiritual world situated?

The spiritual world may interpenetrate the present material world and therefore be all around us though imperceptible; just as the ether interpenetrates all matter and all space and yet is imperceptible to us.

Can you give me any recent first-hand evidence that you have investigated without any paid professional medium?

Yes, I have within the last few weeks investigated such a case, which turns out to be one of the most remarkable evidential cases I have met with.

I received recently the following letter from a personal friend, a lady living at Easthourne:

"Since the death of my son Robin, who was an officer and was torpedoed and drowned on his way out to South Africa last October, I have had a remarkable experience, which seems to me to afford exceptionally good evidence of survival.

"About three weeks after receiving the news of my boy's tragic end I went to my brother's house in London for a week-end. His cook-housekeeper there asked me, to my great surprise, If I was interested in spiritualism? I asked her why, and she replied that her sister Mary, who had previously lived with my brother as parlor maid, had received a message from my boy, whom she knew as a youngster.

"This message was to the effect that my boy wished me to know he had not suffered at all, but had died from shock almost immediately.

"As I had never seen or even thought of this girl since she married two and a half years before, I was naturally much astonished, though the message, of course, was in no sense evidential, for she may have, and probably had, heard of the death of my son through her sister, who, as I said, was my brother's cook-housekeeper. So I requested that if my boy appeared again to her he would send me something that really would prove his identity.

"A week or ten days later I went again to my brother's house and happened to find this sister Mary there. She told me that she had again seen my son and he had given her another message, which she could make nothing of, but hoped it might convey something to me. He said: 'Tell mother I hope Stella (his sister) has been able to get the grey suede shoes she was so anxious to have,' and he added, 'and tell mother that I hope she will keep the pen in a sheath always by her.'

"The interesting and remarkable feature of this message is that the day before my son left for his fatal voyage (last October), his sister was hunting round different shops for grey suede shoes, which seemed very difficult to get, and my son and I spent the whole morning together, going from shop to shop, seeking for a silver chatelaine case for my fountain pen, which he gave me as a parting present.

"Now Mary had not seen either me or my son or any member of my family since she married two and a half years ago, and there was no possible means of her knowing or finding out anything whatever about the pen or the shoes."

No Channel Of Knowledge

Upon receiving this letter I asked the writer to call upon me when next in London. She did so, and in reply to my questions she said she was not staying at her brother's house in London at the time her boy sailed, so neither he nor his housekeeper knew anything about the suede shoes or the fountain pen. Further, that her brother was not interested in spiritualism and the subject had never been mentioned between them, and she had not the least idea that his housekeeper and her sister were interested in the subject.

The clairvoyant Mary also wrote in reply to my questions:

"I hereby state that I had never at any time heard of any suggestion of gray shoes being sought or that Mr. Robin had given his mother a fountain-pen case, nor had I seen or been near any member of the family for two and one-half years, nor had my sister heard anything about those things either."

My friend kindly brought Mary to see me. She appears to be a very straightforward, intelligent young woman. She told me she frequently has these clairvoyant visions. Doubtless they are often mere dream creations of her subconscious mind, but in the present case what she apparently heard could not be so explained.

The much-worn and much-abused theory of telepathy from the living seems also an improbable explanation, unless we stretch that hypothesis to quite illegitimate lengths. It is more probable, assuming the existence of a soul in man, that the deceased officer found an avenue by which he could communicate mentally with those he knew on earth and gave the trivial incidents mentioned as proofs of his identity and survival of memory.

Imports

Piece Goods. No change to report from last week.

Yarn. Prices are inclined to be a little easier, but there is still a brisk demand, and clearances are good.

Exports

There have been small purchases reported of Green Tallow, White Tallow, and Sesamum Seed by Foreign shippers. Chinese purchases of Cotton are also reported at rather higher prices than the preceding week.

Cotton Market

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. write as follows in their weekly report:

China Cotton.—Our market during the past week in which the Mid-Autumn Festival and Anniversary of the Chinese Republic intervened, proved to be devoid of any demand from any of the Mills operating locally and whatever little business took place among the native traders was more or less of a speculative nature in no way creating any marked influence in respect of prices which remained steady throughout the week but evolving at the close subtle signs of improvement.

We had occasion to mention in one of our previous reports about a withholding movement being contemplated in the interior marts and from evidences to hand such a condition of affairs is now actually in progress, which circumstance coupled with the general expectation of a lower crop this season than that of last year, has generated a feeling in the trade that prices will move more on an ascending than a descending scale. Tone of the market, Steady.
